Performance notes:

At A, pianist stands up, faces audience, and recites an announcement. It may be pertinent to the piece or it may be wholly incongruous. He then sits down and resumes playing.

At B, pianist again faces audience. But as he is commencing his second announcement, the jeune fille reappears from back stage. She is wielding a pie, which she accurately flings onto the face of the pianist. The piece – indeed, the entire suite of piano pieces – ends forthwith.
