

Approach, Flight, Entry

Bob spent a whole year refining his acrobatically intricate Flexner-Swan Dive for the Summer Olympics, so imagine his surprise and frustration when he learned from the judges that his was a solo competition and his six diving assistants were not allowed to help. Oh, he dived anyway, but because his approach, flight, and entry were severely compromised, Bob was the first contestant in Olympic history to score a perfect zero.