

The Importance of Clear Enunciation

When Bob returned to the Acme Body Shop to pick up his car, he got a shock that was reminiscent of the time he stepped on the third rail of the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe. All he'd wanted was for them to pound out the little ding on his car's right front fender, then maybe touch up the area with some Bondo and paint. But Zabmar, the auto detailer, thought Bob had said a "little bling," which he cheerfully applied to the car in spades. And when Bob wondered aloud how the word "little" applied to his car's extreme make-over, Zabmar responded that he was an artist after all, and was thus free to take whatever poetic license he deemed necessary. Let this be a lesson to all in the importance of enunciating clearly!
