

The Group of Ten

Contrary to popular opinion, the Group of Ten refers not to the industrialized countries that meet to map out the world's economic and financial matters, but rather to the Supreme Council of Harridans, ten querulous women who write policy for the Heritage Foundation. They do so by practicing haruspicy, which is divination through the inspection of sheep entrails (though you probably already knew that). That, I think, explains a lot.