

Guess ~~What~~ Who?

The 1967 movie "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" is the story of a young white woman who brings a young, idealistic black physician, with whom she has had a whirlwind romance, to dinner with their parents. That's how it finally made it to the big screen, anyway. However the original premise was titled "Guess What's Coming to Dinner," and featured a 30-foot long python that killed and devoured eleven guests who were attending a pot luck supper hosted by Emil and Bernice Dinklaker. But Spencer Tracy, one of the stars, suffered from ophidiophobia and demanded a few alterations to the screenplay, changes that earned the film two Oscars.