

At the Hair Stylist

Many humans harbor a deep-seated fear of werewolves, but the same is true of werewolves – they're scared to death of humans! Or at least the ones who tend to their hair care needs. And lycanthropes have a lot of hair care needs. Whether they're in for their weekly pedicure, a full body trim, or a Brazilian bikini wax, werewolves hate having their fur touched, even by a caring professional. Now, this is usually more worrisome for the hair stylist, for while the werewolf may suffer the fleeting ignominy of an unattractive coif, the stylist will typically wind up with his or her viscera ripped out, which greatly diminishes the employee's productivity. Permanently, too.
