After John Carlos and Tommie Smith raised their arms in a Black Power salute following their podium finish at the 1968 Olympics' 200 meter race, they were expelled from the Games and harshly ostracized. But two days later, when Rose, Gertrude, Zeppelina, and Lois struck nearly the identical pose after creaming the competition in the Dinky Duck Slip 'n Slide Relay, the same panel of judges saw only "four cute cut-ups." Hypocrisy? Hah! What do you think?!
