

Birth of the Lightsaber

Contrary to popular belief, the lightsaber energy sword, the signature weapon of the Jedi order, was not born on an atomic-powered laboratory workbench of a futuristic scientific research institute whose German director had invented invisible lederhosen. Rather, it was the result of a series of 18 seemingly unrelated events that ended when Mrs. Millicent Monadnik inadvertently set the focus control of her Dinklaker Duck Defeatherer to “Wide,” and her long-suffering husband, Lars, suffered one last time by somehow becoming a 1.33-meter-long blade of plasma.
