

The Moltaphant

Eminent pachydermologist Randall Dinklaker theorized that most elephants could molt if they wanted to, but he had no proof, causing his research grant rivals – notably the skeptics at the Princeton Elephant Academy – to scoff at him. So imagine the irony when four interns at P.E.A. discovered that Tigger, the academy's mascot, had both molted and bolted, and was now shackled up with Dinklaker in a PETA-sanctioned bungalow in Oxnard ... which is (mercifully) another story.